FIRST PROJECT MANAGEMENT CAREER CLINIC LAUNCHED

Arras® People, the UK's leading programme and project management recruitment company, announced the opening of the first PMC, Project Management Clinic, available to job-seekers. This is a new service, available to candidates who register or are registered at Arras People, where they can call and speak to one of our senior consultant team regarding issues specific to their careers in project management related services.

Lindsay Scott, Director of Arras People, said:

"Through this service we offer our candidates an even higher quality service and promote two way communication, both often a bugbear for candidates dealing with generalist recruiters. The PMC service allows each person a 15 minute slot to talk about whatever related matter they want and gain advice from our team, themselves qualified and experienced project management practitioners. Topics covered in the calls include the more general careers advice – anything from CV critique to training course recommendation through to specific project issues from achieving deadlines or to difficult negotiations with third parties for example."

The clinic is open to all who currently work or would like to work as a project management professional, from programme directors, project managers to project support and graduates. The PMC is taking bookings now through the Arras People website – www.arraspeople.co.uk
